

PERFORMER

Citizen & Unaffiliated

BACKGROUND

Performers are a part of every culture across the known world , providing entertainment to all different classes of people; immortalizing heroes, historical figures or events, and various folkloric tales; and contributing to multiple artistic fields and endeavors throughout their lives. In a society where many, if not most, people are illiterate, they represent an important source of historical, topical, and legendary events. Although performers are not necessarily affiliated with innate magic or thaumaturgy, their art often produces unique effects in their audiences. For as long as anyone can remember, there has always been an element of the unbelievable in the performing arts.

Many performers decide to join the Bards of Éras, serving at the courts of monarchs or working directly for nobility. Others prefer to work among the people, participating in local performing troupes or making a living on their own. Either way, a great deal of skill and training is required to become a performer; and talented and experienced individuals—with the proper patronage—have the opportunity to become quite wealthy and famous throughout Kordi and even further. In general, performers tend to appeal to the Gold God for good luck, inspiration, and fortune, as it has been said that the Gold God has a particular fondness for the arts.

DUTIES & RESPONSIBILITIES

Being a performer involves undertaking creative performances within a specific classification— verbal (actors, storytellers), musical (singers, musicians), and physical (dancers, acrobats)—in order to entertain people or, in some cases, grant certain buffs. In order to progress within this profession, you will be required to actually perform in-game. Unlike other professions, performers do not earn a set stipend; rather, their income depends on how much they charge for their performances and/or whether they choose to work under a patron. Many performers play songs or undertake street performances for tips, while staged events may require audience members to purchase tickets beforehand. For the mechanical purposes of this profession, a performance is any event, routine, recitation, or other presentation with at least 5 audience members in attendance.
